

Political snakes
and ladders

The Electoral Commission

You have gone up in the opinion polls.

Move forward three spaces.

Political snakes
and ladders

The Electoral Commission

The voter turnout in your area increases.

Move forward three spaces.

Political snakes
and ladders

The Electoral Commission

You visit your local school or college to talk about politics. It goes well.

Roll again.

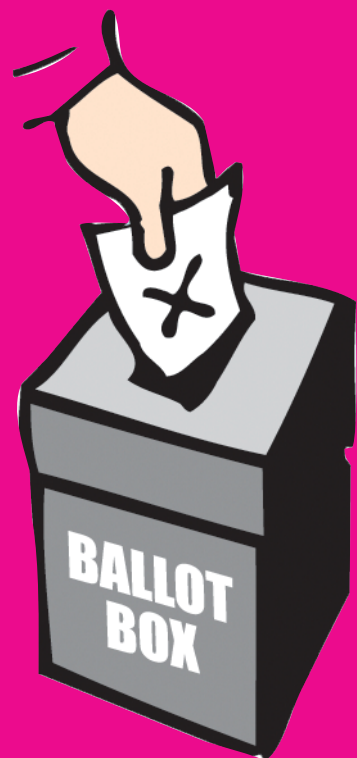

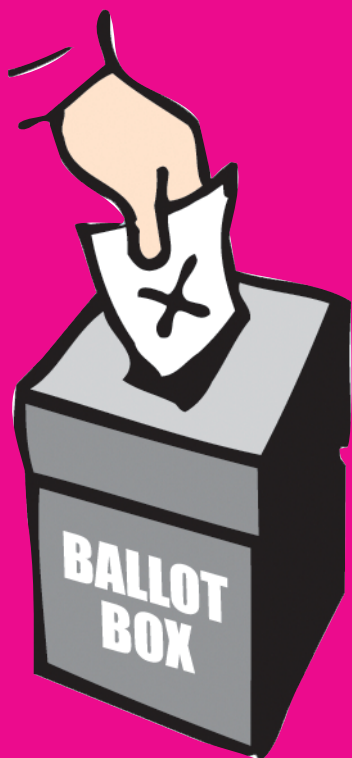

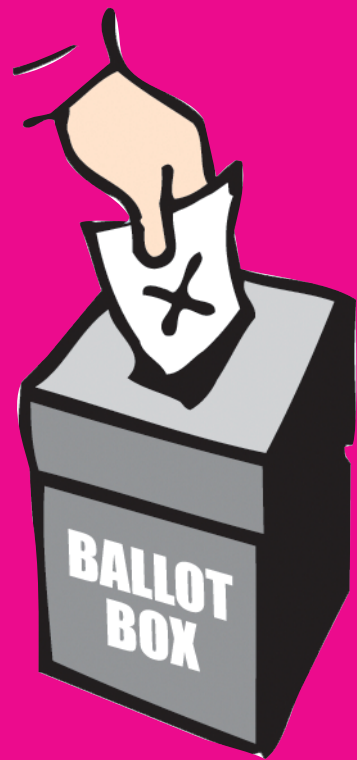

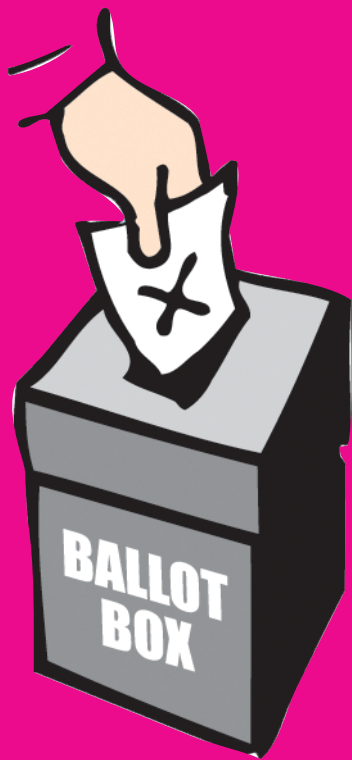

Political snakes
and ladders

The Electoral Commission

You get to visit the European Parliament in Brussels.

Move forward three spaces.

A new motorway is being built through your constituency. The town is divided about whether you need it

Roll the dice if it is 3 or above move forward 3 spaces, if it is below 3 move backwards 3 spaces.

The local newspaper writes a negative article about you.

Move back two spaces.

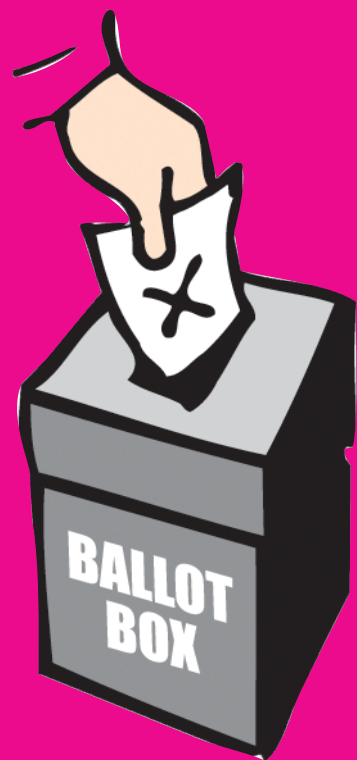

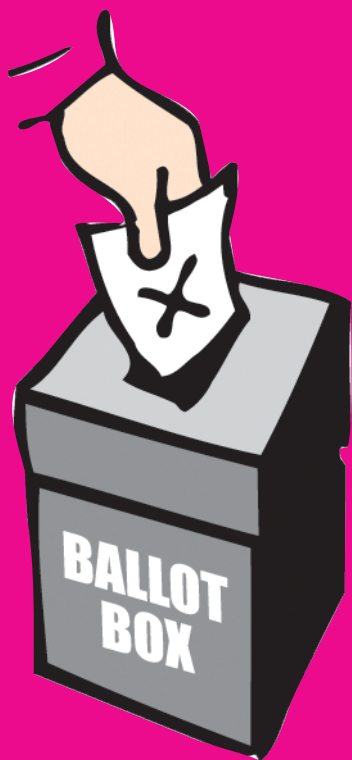

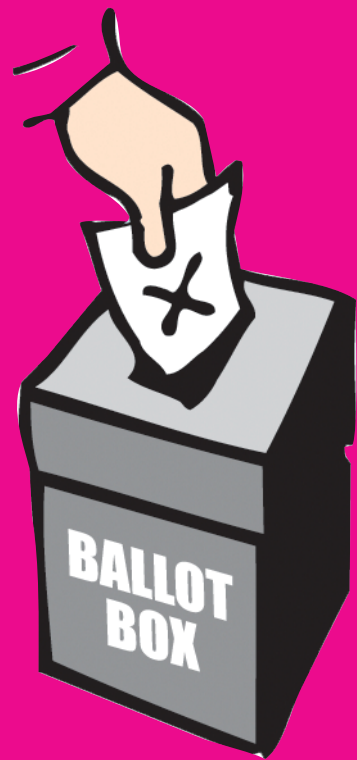

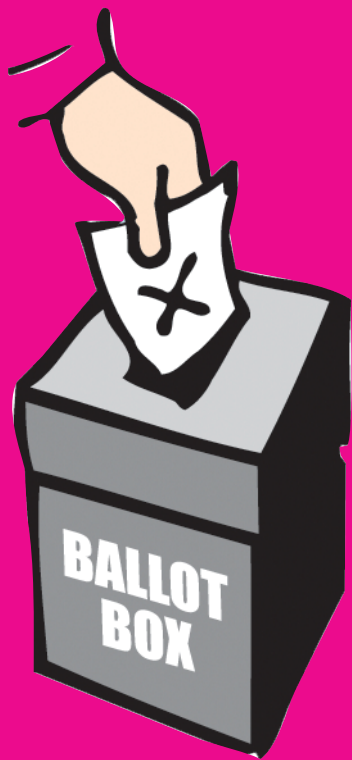

You do not answer a query from a local resident quickly enough. They go to the local paper.

Move back three spaces.

You have convinced the residents of your constituency to do a 'clean up day'. This will improve the local environment.

Move forward two spaces.

You miss an important division (vote) in the House of Commons.

Move back four spaces.

You solve a problem for a member of your constituency.

Move forward three spaces.

A sewerage plant is being built in your area. You fought this all the way.

Move back 5 spaces.

You make a policy announcement and it goes down well with the public.

Move forward three spaces.

There is an election coming up and your party is very popular.
It is likely that you will be re-elected.

Move forward four spaces.

You are moving from the backbenches to the front bench

Move forward three spaces.

You speak directly to the Prime Minister about an issue affecting one of your constituency members.

Move forward two spaces.

